

Serious illness, with its accompanying stresses and extended absences from school, can wreak havoc on a child's educational life...

...but it doesn't have to.

The personalized approach to education

Chai Lifeline has partnered with Tree of Knowledge, a leading educational management corporation, to offer your child a comprehensive and integrated education when illness makes classroom instruction impossible.

Across the country, parents turn to Tree of Knowledge, the personalized program that works with your child's school, to assure that learning continues even when your child is out of school.

Helping Hearts, a program of Tree of Knowledge, will keep your child up to date with the classes he or she has temporarily left.

Helping Hearts customizes your child's learning experience.

- ✎ Helping Hearts personnel constantly confer with your child's school, ensuring that the necessary material is covered.
- ✎ Tutors follow school-provided and approved curricula in math, science, language arts, history, and other subjects as needed.
- ✎ Educational sessions take place in your home or your child's hospital room.
- ✎ Interactive proprietary computer software provides added instruction and review.

Helping Hearts enables you to

- ✎ Prepare your child academically and emotionally to return to school.
- ✎ Boost your child's confidence and grant him or her an important sense of accomplishment.
- ✎ Combat the instability and fear associated with illness by providing a sense of normalcy and routine.

Helping Hearts is available at no charge to Chai Lifeline families.

Assistance in Judaic studies is offered through H.E.L.P., Homebound Educational Learning Program. For more information about how H.E.L.P. and Helping Hearts can benefit your child, contact your case manager or call (877) CHAI LIFE.
